Vaccinating

Why vaccinate?

In the UK an estimated 50% of dogs are not up to date with their vaccine courses. This has recently led to increasing reports of outbreaks of potentially dangerous diseases such as the Parvo Virus. In addition to this, if you want to leave your dog in a kennels they will certainly want to see an up to date vaccine certificate. Even if your pet is going away with you, an up to date immunisation is part of the statutory requirements for traveling abroad with your pet. The White Mill Vet Centre uses the most up to date Vaccine on the market.

When should I vaccinate?

We recommend that you vaccinate as early as possible to minimise the risk of disease. This is from eight weeks for a puppy. The initial course will consist of two vaccines being given 3 to 4 weeks apart.

At the first vaccination, your pet will be given a full health check, free of charge by the vet. We recommend that you keep your pet on your premises for one week after the second vaccine has been administered. Your pet will then need a booster vaccine yearly to keep up the protection. We will remind you of this by post.
